Nothing could be made out of the message to indicate to those familiar with Dr. Miller's movements in New-York where he desired the money to be sent by telegraph, and a letter was mailed, inclosing the money, to a mutual friend in New-York.

MR. STRAUS WILL STILL SELL MILK. THE BENEFITS OF STERILIZATION-EFFORTS TO REDUCE THE CITY'S DEATH RATE.

To the Editor of The Tribune. Sir: I desire to contradict most emphatically rumor that I am going to abandon any further efforts to place sterilized milk within the reach of the children of the poor of New-York. The fact that one of the employes at one of the depots was detected in skimming some of the milk goods business. I confess to having been rather rprised at the prominence given to this incident trust on the part of one of those in my employ systematic and earnestly directed efforts to save it should be deemed unworthy of notice, while the these efforts should be treated as one of the most

MORE PROTECTION FOR DEER NEEDED

THE CLOSE TIME IS ENDED TOO SOON WITH BAD RESULTS TO THE FAWNS. To the Editor of The Tribune.

Sir: Many are the letters addressed to editors of journals in this State at this season of the year advocating more stringent legislation for the pro-tection of the deer in the Adirondack Mountains, and many and various are the suggestions prof-fered for accomplishing this. There are those who insist that hounding is the cause of the depletion of the deer, others ascribe it to jacking, and so on, but I am confident that the two above mentioned reasons play but a small part in this matand customs of this animal, they would readily see that the fault lies simply in opening the season for killing deer far too early in the year. For instance the doe that is shot between August 15 25 is invariably found to be "wet," or with milk, having a young fawn near by, depending entirely for sustenance on its mother. This fawn, deprived of milk, is forced to find what food it can among the young shoots springing from second growth timber, but gains no strength, and after a few the young shoots springing from second growth timber, but gains no strength, and after a few hard frosts dies from sheer weakness; or, being unable to protect itself by flight, is often killed by the bucke, which descend from the mountain tops about October 1 for the rutting season.

Compared with ten years ago, there are many more deer to-day in those parts of the Adirondacks adjacent to the large preserves where few of no deer are killed, but in the sections far removed from these restricted places the deer have undoubtedly largely diminished in number in that time. Some of the larger hotelkeepers in the Adirondacks are, in a measure, responsible for the early opening of the nounding season, using their induces to maintain the present law that the entertainment of hunting may be offered their guests before the time arrives for closing their doors, about October 1. However, if the hounding of deer were permitted from October 1 to October 3I fewer does would be killed, for at that time they are not encumbered with their young, having weaned them, and they are as well able to take care of themselves then as are the bucks, and the fawns being weaned will mature into fine deer, instead of dying in the wilderness from starvation and cold.

Few bucks are killed prior to October 1, for they few bucks are killed prior to October 1, for they are then resting quietly in secluded spots near the crests of high mountains, awaiting the hard-the crests of high mountains the protect in the weakly fawn that cannot escape their attacks.

Let us enact a law suitable to the good of the deer, and not continue the present one, which was being firm, they descend to the lower levels in being firm, they d

As an expression of the intensity of human passion and misery the Swedish people of to-day put vide by side Poe's "Raven" and their own poet Nyborn's "Nagara." As a poet Viktor Rydberg is at the front. Several volumes have been published, but none surpasses the last one which contains his famous "Grotto Song." in which he, with all his power, with all his wonderful strength of language attacks the modern naturalism and the worship, the vulgar worship of Mammon. This poem is truly Dantele if any poem is. Dante saw the sufferings of souls in hell and purgatory: Rydberg saw the sufferings of souls in real life under the iron heel of Mammon. Fearlessly he exposed all that was wrong, but nevertheless he was admired and loved, and I hardly believe he had an enemy.

Three nations followed him to his grave in the cemetery of Gothenburg, foremost among them Sweden, who mourns the loss of her greatest literary son.
